TITLE: "Customer Acceptance Framework of Hydroponic Vegetables Products"

ABSTRACT

Consumer awareness of food safety that is not harmful to the body and the fulfillment of nutrients and vitamins are topics related to healthy lifestyles and disease prevention during the COVID-19 pandemic. This causes the market demand for healthy food to continue to increase. One of the healthy foods developed by the community is Hydroponic technology. Hydroponics provides benefits, quality, affordable prices, and positive values so that consumers repurchase hydroponic vegetables. This study is an explanatory research, which aims to determine the relationship between the research variables perceived benefit, perceived quality, perceived value, perceived pricing and repurchase intention. The sample in this study was consumers who had purchased hydroponic vegetable products and had consumed them more than once with purposive sampling technique with certain criteria to ensure data collection was 388 people. This figure is at a safe level to be tested using Structural Equation

Modeling. The questionnaire was distributed in June 2021 online using googleform. Overall, the hypothesis is proven to have a positive and significant effect, the perceived benefits variable has a positive and significant effect on perceived quality and perceived value; Perceived quality has a positive and significant effect on perceived value and repurchase intention; price perception has a positive and significant effect on perceived value and repurchase intention; Perceived value has a positive and significant effect on repurchase intention. This article closes with theoretical and practical implications.

Your comments to the author(s):

8. the data analysis and conclusions need to be added. For instance, the "lower" values of 0.211, 0.212, 0.290, 0.480 and 0.529, what went "wrong" with those relationships? Though positive, but logically, it is expected that the relations should have been much higher

9. where is the managerial implications? Where is the estimated costs on

1. there are incomplete sentences and typos. Please use the spell-check prior to any submissions

2. when using the brackets for the citations, please make sure to edit the corresponding citations. Brackets are intended to be placed at the end of the sentences. When citations are placed as a portion of the sentences, last names of the authors are typed manually first before inserting the citations. Then edit the citations to only show the year and/or page. For instance, as a part of the sentences, "According to Smith (2022, p. 10)" instead of "According to (Smith, 2022, p. 10)" ==> edit the citations!

3. show the research model with the corresponding hypotheses

4. the purposive sampling was used in this study. Related to the topic on hydroponic, it appears tolerable. However, you are relying on a parametric testing. Is it not violating the basic statistical analysis though? If you are going to use the parametric tests, then you must rely on the probability sampling of either cluster and/or stratified (not even random and systematic as they are relatively impossible to implement in the real world)

5. referring to your descriptive statistics, your result may likely lean toward "teachers/lecturers" though with a maximum salary of 300 Euros

6. This study shows different fonts & spacing are used in the manuscript

7. repeat table headers automatically

8. the data analysis and conclusions need to be added. For instance, the "lower" values of 0.211, 0.212, 0.290, 0.480 and 0.529, what went "wrong" with those relationships? Though positive, but logically, it is expected that the relations should have been much higher

9. where is the managerial implications? Where is the estimated costs on potential improvement, as a part of managerial implications?

10. where is the recommendations?
